IRIS

CULTIVATION, AND PLANTING SUGGESTIONS

There are iris for both wet and dry situations. The most satisfactory flowering varieties require a well drained, sunny location. The bulb or rhizome should be planted just below the surface of the ground. The roots, with which good plants are well supplied, should be spread out and the soil packed firmly about them. Any good garden soil will be found suitable for iris. Bone meal or finely ground limestone are very good fertilizing elements. Manure should be sparingly used as it is apt to produce root rot. This is one of the worst diseases the iris grower has to contend with and is more prevalent during a warm, wet season. Lime phosphate or superphosphate of lime will be found of great benefit in checking this trouble. Finely ground plaster placed in the trench in which iris is planted will be found beneficial. Where iris is found to be badly infected, it is best to dig up the plants, remove all diseased portions, dip in a light solution of formaldehyde or permanganate of potash and replant in a new location. For borders and in any perennial planting, the iris are indispensable. Most pleasing color combinations may be secured. In delicacy of texture and profusion of color, the iris rivals the peony.

Iris may be planted successfully at any time when the ground is not frozen. Perhaps the very best time is shortly after the blooming season or during July and August. This gives the plant sufficient time to obtain a good root growth before freezing weather retards growth.

The plants we send out are first class in every respect, and with ordinary care will repay the owner many times for his investment.

OUR SHIPPING SEASON WILL COMMENCE ABOUT JULY 15TH and we urge early orders, for at the very liberal prices quoted it is evident that surplus stocks of some of our varieties will be quickly disposed of.

Unless instructed to do so, we will not make substitutions. If substitution is granted, we will endeavor to furnish a variety fully equal or better than the one ordered. Please bear in mind that iris can be planted during the early fall months with very gratifying results.

In the following descriptions "S" signifies standards or upright petals, and "F" indicates falls or drooping petals.

The rating marks are those given by the American Iris Society, and represent the impartial judgment of iris lovers all over the country.
